

Sinclair Broadcasting's is the perfect example of what happens when the public airwaves are controlled by large companies: we get just one view of the news, the one that is convenient to them. I thought that the all point of TV stations and radio was to inform the public on the point of views of everyone, not just the one that think and protect companies like Sinclair Broadcasting.

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.
